players over the course.

The weather conditions were in no way a handicap to the play, though threatening to bring the match to an abrupt end by a sudden downpour. The match ended just before the first drops of rain fell.

The players teed off promptly at 10 oclock. Mrs. Polhemus was first off to a fairly good drive. By superior approach work, Miss Harley won the hole. The next three holes were halved. Mrs. Polhemus was 2 up on the fifth. From that hole to the finish the match proved easy for the Fall River entrant, who played an almost perfect game to the thirteenth hole, where the match was concluded.

Sensational Play.

The weather conditions were in no way a handicap to the play, though the gubernatorial, and the Congressional and so on all down the line. Last night, in Indianapolis, one bet of $500 was made that Taft would lead Bryan in Iidiana by 20,000. Here today, the offers of even money that Taft will carry the State by 15,000 find few Bryan backers.

This feeling of confidence among the betting men is typical of the way the politicians are feeling. They deciare that if the election had been held ten days ago, Bryan would have won, but that since then the trend has been all to-ward the proservation of the integrity of the Chinese empire.

Sensational Play.

Sensational Play.

The work of Miss Harley at Chevy Chase for the past week is declared by followers of golf to be the most by followers of golf to be the most sensational finat has marked a woman's tournament for the past five years. She entered the tournament without other distinction than two bronze medal-play cups. She has clearly outclossed the entire field in this week's event—a field which included titleholders, present and past, and a classy group of likely contenders.

Seen a veritable triumphal tour through Indiana. He has ridden through towns that seemed masses of waving hats and hards.

Cheered by Mobs.

As his train sped through stations, the rumbling of the rushing wheels was drowned by the cheers of those who had gathered on the platform.

Miss Harley's play was marked by a uniform steadiness that, combined with her excellent judgment, proved too much for the veterans of many battles. Until her defeat of Miss Margaret Curtis she had attracted practically no attention as a contender. When she duplicated the feat by besting Mrs. Fox in a match that was carried to the twentleth hole, she demonstrated that her play was of champlonship caliber. Today she clearly outclassed Mrs. Polhemus and left no doubt as to her right to hold the highest honor bestowed upon a woman golfer.

GRANDSTAND, MOTOR PARKWAY, L. I., Oct. 24 .- George Robertson, driving a 90-horsepower Locomobile American car, won the Vanderbilt Cup race today from a field of sevente entrants, representing the crack speed cars and drivers of the world. time was 4 hours and 48 seconds, Herbert Lytle, driving the 50-horse

No Fatalities.

Unlike any other contest of the kind of equal magnitude today's race was run without a single fatality or serious accident, this despite the fact that the race started in a drizzling rain, which made the roadway slippery and caused the big racing machines to skid dangerously at the turns. So close was the finish, that it required the official announcement of Robertson's time to announcement of Robertson's time to determine the winner and when this was announced, thousands surged on the field and the judges, fearing to allow the other cars to finish in the crowd, declared the race finished.

Three hundred thousand persons witnessed the contest from the mammoth granistands at the finish and banked a score deep at every one of the difficult turns at which the skill of the drivers were put of the greatest test. Seldom has the event developed a closer contest. Off on a splendid start the winner led the field on lapsed time at the end of the first lap around. On the second and third laps, he repeated this performance, but on the fourth had a bad trip and Haupt, driving a wonderfully consistent race in a Chadwick, went into first place and held the lead until the sixth lap, when Robertson again went to the front.
